CALE COAKLEY AND HIS BRIDE

With five justices of the peace performing the ceremony and fifteen police officers and county officials standing by as witnesses, Caleb Coakley, wealthy proprietor of a road house in Colma, who was divorced recently, and Mrs. Bessie Anthony, a dashing widow of San Francisco, again set sail on the billows of married bliss Saturday afternoon. It was the tightest knot ever tied in San Mateo county and the most unique wedding ceremony in the history of California.

The marriage was solemnized in the parlors of the Sequoia hotel at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon and the ceremony was read in chorus by Justice of the Peace H. H. Lampkin of Redwood City, Justice of the Peace Ellis Johnson of Daly City, Justice of the Peace John F. Davis of San Bruno, Justice of the Peace Joseph A. McCormick of San Mateo and Justice of the Peace John Pitcher of Halfmoon Bay. Every one of the five justices implanted a smacking kiss on the blushing cheeks of the bride.

As far as the 20 officials were concerned, the wedding was an impromptu affair. Sheriff J. H. Mansfield and District Attorney Franklin Swart had called a conference of the justices of the peace and police officers of the county to discuss closer co-operation in criminal matters. The meeting was in progress when Coakley and his bride to be arrived. The official wedding was quickly arranged.

Justice of the Peace John Pitcher of Half Moon Bay, who is 86 years of age, was master of ceremonies, and as he said the words of the marriage ceremony his fellow justices repeated the words in chorus.

Following the wedding, Coakley invited everybody to join him and his bride in the banquet hall of the hotel. The 20 officials united in pledging a brimming cup to the happiness of the couple.

Coakley is 53 years of age and is well known in political circles. His bride is 34 years old and before her first marriage was Miss Bessie Kelly, a social favorite of San Francisco.

Among the witnesses at the wedding were Supervisor John McBain, Constables James Parker of Daly City, James Wallace of South San Francisco, Ferguson Owen of Burlingame, Michael Sheehan of San Mateo, Martin Walsh of Menlo Park and Fred Simmonds of Half Moon Bay, Sheriff J. H. Mansfield, District Attorney Franklin Swart, Under Sheriff John J. Shields, Jailer Ollie Parker, Chief of Police George E. Jones of Burlingame, Chief of Police James Coleman of Redwood City, Motorcycle Policemen Michael Brown, George Lowans, James Logan, Fred Vallejo, Maurice Sheehan and Abe Segar and Marshal Gerald Conens and Deputy Marshal Claude M. Hershey of Hillsborough.

Superior Court

The defendants in the suit of Annie L. Turner and others against the Bernhard Mattress Company of San Francisco have filed notice of appeal to the Court of appeals from the decision of Judge Buck on June 5, denying the demand and motion of defendant for a change of place of the trial of the case from this county to the Superior Court of the County of San Francisco.

Clark & Henry have commenced an action against John Wurz and wife to recover the sum of $288.25 for paving streets in front of lots 8 and 9, block 6, Western Addition to the town of San Mateo and owned by defendants. Plaintiff also asks for interest in the sum of $116.40 and costs of suit.

The American Bonding Company of Baltimore has petitioned to be released on the bond of W. H. Reed, administrator of the estate of James Reed, deceased. The bond is $35,000 and the company in its petition states that it wishes to be released from the responsibility on account of the future acts of administrator. The company has been on the bond since February 29, 1912. Reed has been cited to appear on August 14 and relieve the company of any further responsibility.

A notice of dismissal, in so far as Richard Nahems is concerned, in the case of the American Land and Water Company against J. D. Wilson and others, has been filed in the clerk's office.

Edward Hillebrand of Woodside has commenced an action for damages against W. Parker Lyons in the sum of $15,718.50. The complaint alleges that plaintiff on August 1, 1912, with a companion, William Benedetti, were driving in a buggy toward La Honda and when "Rocky Point" was reached the animal began to rear and prance at the approach of an automobile driven by Lyons. The latter continued his journey, making no effort to slow down or in any way assist plaintiff in his predicament. The horse became unmanageable and went over the grade. Hillebrand was badly injured, suffering a fracture of the right leg. He has not fully recovered from his injuries and may be a cripple for life. The complaint alleges that the accident was through the carelessness of defendant in not stopping his machine and rendering assistance. W. Parker Lyons was formerly mayor of Fresno and is reputed to be a millionaire. Two years ago he purchased a palatial residence at Woodside and recently sold it to a capitalist of Fresno. Mr. Lyons is now traveling in Europe.

The Continental Building and Loan Association has brought suit against Henry Zitschland and wife to secure possession of lot 3, block 15, and improvements. The association advanced the money to erect the building on the property which was to be paid for by installments by defendant. He has failed in his monthly payments. Plaintiff asks for damages in the sum of $300 for the unlawful detention of premises and costs of suit. A demand for the property was made on defendant on June 26th, last.

M. J. Hynes, guardian of the person and estate of Loren Coburn, an incompetent person, has petitioned to sell the Monterey ranch consisting of nearly 10,000 acres of land. The petitioner asks that the court use its own discretion in making the order for sale, whether it is to be sold at auction, private sale or sold in subdivisions. Mr. Wideman has an option on the ranch for its purchase at $326,000. Mr. Hynes alleges in his petition that it would take an outlay of $50,000 to make the property productive, and believes it would be to the best interest of the estate to sell the land.

Margaret Brown vs. Chester W. Brown. Return on citation continued to August 2.

The People vs. E. Martin. Passing of sentence continued to August 2 at request of defendant.

Lillian East vs. George F. East. Interlocutory decree of divorce granted plaintiff.

Geo. E. Dunn vs. Hazel Dunn. Order made modifying decree of divorce in the matter of the custody of child. Defendant to have child when she wishes but not for more than one week at a time.

THE SUPERVISORS SAN MATEO COUNTY SOLONS

The meeting of the Board of Supervisors was quite interesting Monday, principally on account of the large delegation from San Bruno, who were interesting themselves in the proposed incorporation of the City of San Bruno. The reports of the county officials were read and filed.

Quite a number of liquor licenses, both Class A and Class B, were renewed.

A good sized petition was read in support of a new license in San Bruno and the same was opposed by a remonstrance petition. Mrs. Augusta B. Haliday and J. M. Custer spoke in opposition to the license stating that the proposed saloon would be in close proximity to the school and also to the M. E. church. Action was postponed until Sept. 2.

The application of Martinelli, Colma, for a Class B license was denied for the reason that he was not naturalized citizen.

Two indigent applicants granted.

S. Peiser, representing the Pacific Bone and Fertilizing Co., whose plant was recently destroyed by fire near Visitation, represented a large petition requesting that no restriction be placed in way of reconstructing the plant, the cost of which would be $75,000 and would employ a large number of men. A petition had previously been filed against the rebuilding of the plant, but was not represented, so the prayer of Mr. Peiser was granted and building will be begun at once.

Chairman Brown asked that the health officer and district attorney be instructed to inspect a nuisance near the school house in San Mateo Homestead tract. So ordered.

District Attorney Swart given further time to investigate new law regarding the regulation of fire districts, in the matter of the application from San Bruno asking an appropriation of $200 for fire protection.

District Attorney Swart introduced a drastic ordinance against the two remaining hog ranchers at Colma, who had incorporated, so that it was difficult to reach them under Ordinance No. 250, in which all the other hog ranches had been exterminated.

The ordinance passed unanimously.

New Building Contracts.

The Judson Manufacturing Company of San Francisco agrees to do the structural iron work and cast iron work for the southern wing of the Sacred Heart Academy at Menlo Park in 90 days for $13,344. Herman Grussel agrees to do the excavating, certain concrete work and other work for the same structure in 60 days for $3610. Herman Grussel also agrees to do the artificial stone work on the same building in 60 days for $1350.

W. C. Barrick agrees to erect a building, shed and fence for H. R. Hicks in 30 days on lot 33, Easton. for $3600.

E. W. Demarais agrees to erect for Edward Reardon in 60 days, a two-story frame building in the Crocker tract for $2150.

The matter of the incorporation of the City of San Bruno came up for discussion after lunch.

J. H. O'Keefe represented the petitions and Judge Fitzpatrick and Geo. Ross represented property owners who did not wish to be included in the incorporation.

When the petition was first filed July 7 there was no map accompanying same so the supervisors asked for one which was presented and filed as a part of the proceedings.

Henry Spaulding was the first to advocate the cause of incorporation stating that there were 1,500 people whose condition would be materially benefited with a chance to govern themselves.

W. H. Turnbull urged the necessity of police protection, sanitary conditions and better streets as his main arguments in favor of incorporation.

Mrs. Holiday also spoke, and urged the necessity of incorporation from a moral standpoint and like the other speakers said many pertinent things favorable to the cause.

T. J. Lynch insisted upon including the entire territory and put particular stress upon the need of police protection to control blind pigs, etc., stating that the people of San Bruno utterly at the mercy of law violators.

Supervisor Casey corrected Lynch by calling attention to the fact that during the past two years a justice of the peace had been appointed in San Bruno and that the place was protected with a deputy sheriff and deputy constable.

J. M. Custer made an able argument and among other things said Colma would be able to rid herself from hog ranches with incorporation. He cited the progressiveness of Burlingame with incorporation and then made the comparison of Belmont, as the home of the opposing attorney (Geo. C. Ross) where they can't even get a decent school house.

Mrs. Laura Gilbert stated that she was engaged in selling real estate and that lots in San Bruno were actually not worth as much as they were when first sold.

Judge Fitzpatrick asked for the matter to be continued 30 days in order that he might have time to investigate the petition and map in the interest of his clients, whom he asserted were not opposed to incorporation but did not wish to have their properties included. Mr. O'Keefe objected arguing the statute of limitation, saying that unless the matter was definitely acted upon in 60 days from the filing of petition, it would be too late.

MacBain moved to postpone until Sept. 2, as asked by Fitzpatrick, who said that would be in the limit as the petition had been filed on July 7.

The motion prevailed when amended so as to authorize the Supervisors and surveyor to take the map and petition and make a special inspection on the grounds.

The date for this was set for Tuesday, August 19.

A written request from Supervisor Francis, who was absent, asking that certain bridges in his township be repaired, was acted upon favorably.

A petition was presented for a new road in the vicinity of Woodside, together with bonds, etc. and the same was accepted and view as appointed.

There being no further business, the board adjourned to Monday, August 18.

An arrangement was made whereby the Supervisors will meet in conference at the St. Germane in San Francisco next Saturday, to consider ways and means of selling the county road bonds.

The local office of the U. S. Forest Service has been advised that on July 17 Patrolman W. C. Fuller, on the Angeles National Forest, arrested two boys, M. Reynolds and H. Stackman, who had left their campfire burning on land within the forest. They were taken before a Justice of the Peace in Pasadena, but inasmuch as they were only young boys the Justice simply reprimanded them and let them go.

This leniency is not shown to adult offenders, and the minimum penalty under the state law is $50. On July 21 Forest Ranger Zachary arrested C. W. Henry for leaving a campfire unextinguished; he was prosecuted under the state law, before Justice McDonald of Pasadena, plead guilty and was fined fifty dollars.

San Mateo Co. Development Assn.

Several months ago the Board of Governors of the San Mateo County Development Association appointed a committee from among their number to investigate the financial condition of the Association. In their report they recommended the abolishment of certain offices and discontinuance of certain methods which in their judgment were found to entail unnecessary expense. Among these was the abolishment of the office of manager.

The matters were passed as recommended with the exception of manager which action was postponed indefinitely. Since the time these recommendations were made the San Mateo Index and Daly City Record have printed editorials favorable to the abolishment of the office.

On last Monday, after the meeting of the Board of Supervisors and in the chambers of the Board, the present Association manager made a very questionable attack upon the personality of the Index and Record, and used some language which is not usually found in the phraseology of the common, every-day, self-respecting gentleman. To those who were compelled to listen to the wordy epithets it was apparent that the recommendation of the committee was indeed justifiable. And should the office by any means be determined a necessity a change in the personnel would be imperative if the purpose of the Association is to be preserved and the dignity of the organization maintained.

In meeting this attack Editor J. L. Brown maintained the decorum which denotes the large calibre man.—Coast Side Comet.

Building Trades Council Officers

On Thursday evening, July 31, 1913, the Building Trades Council of San Mateo County, met at the Labor Temple in San Mateo and elected the following officers for the ensuing term:

President—J. H. Flynn
Vice President—Patrick Keary
Recording Secretary—Edward Brady
Secretary-Treasurer—Charles H. Morrison

Business Agent—A. S. Brown

The Building Trades Council is in excellent condition and the administration during the past year is deserving of much praise, so that it is particularly pleasing to not only Trade Unionists but to the people in general that J. H. Flynn has been retained as president, Charles H. Morrison as secretary and A. S. Brown as business agent, for they have certainly done their duty with fairness to all.

With the assurance of industrial peace such as we are now enjoying in all its satisfying assurance, local labor conditions are bound to improve.

The new officials, Patrick Keary and Edward Brady are both wide-awake gentlemen, loyal Unionists and excellent citizens, who will undoubtedly prove valuable advisers to their associates.

STUDY IN BROWNS.

A Color Scheme to Be Popular This Fall.

PICTURE FROCK IN BROWN SHADES.

In the fall a brown costume always seems to tone with nature's coloring, the falling leaves and the general prevalence of reds and greens in the foliage.

This gown is what one might call a study in autumn tints. The skirt is of brown chiffon cloth and hangs in straight folds to the feet, where it is more voluminous than the jupes we have been wearing.

The kimono bodice is of a thin silk, with a leaf design carried out in the autumn tints of green, dull brown and reds.

Bleaching Lingerie Waists.

When perspiration has left a yellow mark cover the blemish with peroxide of hydrogen and leave until dry; then cover with ammonia and wash. Ammonia water may be used to wash woolen waists on parts where perspiration has left marks. The ammonia will clean the material without injury to the fabric and also destroy all odor. Often a mark in fine material may be removed in the following manner: In a saucer or pan place a lighted match and cover with sulphur. When it begins to burn, cover with a funnel to hold in the fumes. Hold the dampened material over the end of the funnel, and in most cases it will bleach the spot. Work by an open window where there is a strong draft in order to avoid inhaling any of the fumes.

Crinolines to Come.

Before the very tight skirt came in we should have hailed with something approaching dismay the news from Paris that the fashions of 1830 are expected to supersede those of the present year. But as a relief from tightly dragged skirts, no petticoats and copious visions of hosiery the gowns of 1830 would be a welcome change.

It is the fashion now to deride everything Victorian, but perhaps leniency will be extended to the year 1830, which was not Victorian. There is even a rumor that crinolines will follow upon this revolution in dress. That would be bad indeed, but scarcely worse than the plague of ugly and indecorous dresses from which we are now suffering.

Entertain Your Club Outdoors.

Have the refreshments put up in boxes, as for a picnic lunch. Arrange them in three courses—sandwiches with salted peanuts, cake and fruit. Have the boxes numbered, two to each number, and number each course. Give one number to a man, another to a woman, and let them hunt partners by matching numbers and eat the first course together. When they get to the cake another number is found, and they hunt the number to match. Still another number comes with the fruit, and this necessitates another change. Ice cream and coffee may be served from a table.

Trunk Straps.

Baggage sometimes take a strap from a good trunk to put on one that has broken open. Rivet or screw your strap on to your trunk if you wish to be sure of it when you return from your trip.

Care of Hands in Summer.

The hands in summer, if they are to be kept soft, white and smooth, require almost as much care and attention as during the colder months, for the sun and hot air have a most drying effect on the skin, making it hard looking and wrinkled. Few women realize that it is almost as easy to tell the age by the hands as the face, although some hands have been so neglected by their owners that they look old long before they should, and the same may be said of some faces.

Never judge a woman's age either by her hands or her face, for both are so largely influenced by the treatment they have received in the past that it is never quite fair to do so. Hands do not age and wrinkle in a day or a week. The process is so gradual that it is not noticed till the owner of a pair of aged hands suddenly awakens to the fact that, whatever may be said to the contrary by kind and indulgent friends, her hands stamp her as past forty, although her face may not look thirty.

To keep your hands in really good condition during the summer you must feed them by giving them a liberal supply of oil or cream every night.

For this you may use cocoa butter, pure almond oil, mixed with a little fine oatmeal, or a paste made from the yolks of two eggs, a tablespoonful of pure almond oil, one of honey and a teaspoonful of simple tincture of benzoin. Mix all these together, beating the yolks of the eggs first, then stirring the honey, then the oil and lastly the benzoin. Beat to a cream, smear over the hands, then slip on a pair of old chamol leather gloves with holes cut in the palms and wear them all night.

Once a week is sufficient for this treatment when the hands are in fairly good condition, but when they have been much neglected it should be given every night for two or three weeks till they are soft and smooth; then the weekly treatment will be ample to keep them nice and youthful looking.

Hands which turn red and appear swollen in hot weather should be washed in warm water (never cold), and a few drops of liquid ammonia should be added to the water. After washing they should be dusted with starch, and all gloves should be quite loose fitting.

Many women suffer with moist, clammy hands during summer, and nothing is more uncomfortable or more disastrous to gloves, which become stained and spoiled with one wearing. To remedy this, sponge the hands after washing in warm water with a lotion made by mixing one part eau de cologne with two parts rosewater and dust with borie acid powder mixed with half its quantity of starch. Brush the powder off and the hands will feel dry and fresh.

When choosing gloves for summer wear choose a size which will be too large rather than too small. Squeezing the hands in tight gloves makes them look larger rather than smaller and causes them to become swollen and red, as it impedes the proper circulation. Before putting on the gloves dust a little borie powder into the fingers and palms, as this not only makes them slip on more easily, but keeps the hands dry and cool.

To Reduce Double Chin.

The greatest of all inventors has become a beauty specialist.

After revolutionizing industry, threading nations together with his quadruplex telegraph wire and his electric railway lines, after increasing the value of the country's products until $7,000,000,000 is invested in industries founded or touched by his inventions, Thomas A. Edison has removed a double chin.

Joking? Not at all. Ask Mrs. Edison.

If you have ever met the white haired master of things electric you know his willingness to laugh. It's usually at himself. You will not be surprised, then, to learn that Edison smilingly announced he would brighten eyes, peachify cheeks, fill out neck hollows and abolish surplus chins, all by his new and infallible process—cutting down sleep and food!

"I have proved to my wife, at least," he said, with a twinkle, "that women who would keep young and slender must never sleep but six hours. Less would be better, but six will do."

"Funny, isn't it, how you can talk yourself black in the face trying to demonstrate science to a woman? She won't listen. Talk beauty to her and her attention sticks like glue. Funny, isn't it? Anyhow, I've proved my point, banished the chin and taught her to sleep six hours instead of nine."

Mrs. Edison is so far the only family disciple of the new beauty theory. Miss Madeline, recently betrothed to a young inventor, is not bothering much about extra chins, says her father. Neither are the boys, Theodore and Charles. "But wait," says Papa Edison. "They'll all come round to my way of thinking some day."

For Perspiring Hands.

Hands that are always damp from perspiration may be relieved if treated each day with a preparation made of ninety grains of cologne and fifteen grains of tincture of belladonna. This should be applied three times a day with considerable friction. It has the desired effect if properly used.

BEYOND THE WALL

A Wonderful Coincidence

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Follansbee sat up in bed and listened sharply. To his room on the third floor front of the boarding house the noises of the street came up clearly—the staccato clap-clap of hoofs on the asphalt, the whining alarm of an automobile siren and the hollow sound of voices as late revelers passed under his window.

The sound that had roused him had been another, an unfamiliar sound, in that place and at such an hour. His watch showed it to be half past 2.

Tap, tap, tap—silence. Tap, tap, tap—silence.

There it was plainly now—dots and dashes. It sounded oddly like a telegraph key.

Follansbee got up and pressed his ear against the wall and listened intently, spelling out the words with growing excitement as he grasped their sense.

It was the first time he had taken a message since he had left his station with the P. L. and Q. road to become a newspaper reporter.

The last message he had sent over the wire had been to the operator at the next station, Helen Dunham at Higby Crossing. He had proposed marriage, and Helen had refused him, gently as one may by dot and dash. There was another man—she had been engaged a long time—she thought he knew—she was sorry.

Follansbee had told her not to worry, that it was all right. But if ever she was in trouble and he could do anything for her she was to call upon him at once. Would she promise?

She would, and she did. That was two years ago. For all Ned Follansbee knew Helen was married and settled down with the man she had promised to marry.

Higby Crossing was 2,000 miles from New York city, and in spite of this he was listening to a message. If not from Helen Dunham, from whom was it? What was she saying?

"Ned Follansbee—Ned Follansbee—I need your help—help—help—help!"

Over and over again he heard the message until suddenly it dawned on him with sickening conviction that it was a real message, a message from beyond the wall. If that was so, then Helen Dunham was there, next door, and in grave trouble.

He picked up his hairbrush and rapped an answer in the same code. The raps on his wall sounded muffled and not as distinct as the ones that were coming to him with such terrifying regularity.

When he had repeated his reassuring answer twice the taps ceased. It was as if the sender was listening.

"Coming—coming! Where—are—you? What—is—the-matter?" he asked three times before he got the response.

"Next door. Help—Ned Follansbee—help!" It stopped abruptly, and there was silence after that, and he could not get any response to his repeated calls.

"What an idiot I am," he muttered at last, tossing aside the hairbrush. "Any other man would have jumped at once to relieve the danger." He dived into a few clothes, stepped to the window and looked out.

Next to his window was the window of the room in the adjoining house. It was perhaps four feet distant. By straining out over his own sill he could discern a crack of light under the drawn shade that flapped to and fro in the breeze.

The sidewalk was forty feet below, and the sills were narrow and scarcely afforded a foothold. Ned's brain was planning rapidly.

He slipped a revolver into his pocket and left his room, closing the door softly. The hall lay in darkness where at its end a window opening upon the roof of the extension beneath showed an oblong of grayish light.

Follansbee raised the window and got out on the roof, closing the sash behind him. It was the work of an instant to step to the rear hall window of the adjoining house and, finding it wide open to the night, to step noiselessly within.

Here in the hall of a strange house, where, if he was discovered, he could be apprehended as an unlawful intruder, Ned Follansbee paused to take stock of his surroundings. At the end of the hall was the pale outline of a white painted door. At right angles to it was another door, and from under this door there showed a thin streak of light.

That lighted room must be the one from which the strange message had proceeded.

He stepped to the door and rapped sharply.

There came a startled exclamation and then heavy steps across the floor. An enormously fat man clad in trousers and waistcoat blinked sleepily at him.

"Well," he snarled, "who are you, and what do you want?"

"What's the trouble?" demanded Follansbee.

"Trouble? There's no trouble that I know of, except what you're making yourself! Say, what are you doing here anyway?" he added suspiciously.

Follansbee glanced past him into the room, where there was a glimpse of a typewriting machine and scattered sheets of manuscript.

"I occupy the adjoining room in the next house," explained Follansbee at last. "A few minutes ago I was awakened by what I thought was a telegraph message—sure I read the message right—calling for help."

The fat one threw back his head and laughed noiselessly. "Come in," he chuckled hoarsely. "This is the best ever," he added as he closed the door and pushed a rocking chair toward his midnight visitor. "Sit down. Have a smoke?" He offered a cigar case, but Follansbee shook his head impatiently. "Tell me about it," he said.

The man's face grew sober as he settled himself into a chair before the battered machine. "I'll tell you a story," he said grimly, his brooding eyes fixed on Follansbee's face. "I'm a telegraph operator, and several years ago I was stationed at a little place called Feneby, between Higby Crossing and Placerville.

"The operator at Higby Crossing was a girl. I was gone on her, and we were engaged to be married. Oh, I wasn't as fat as I am now," he said plaintively. "I was good looking and some favorite with the girls."

"At Placerville there was another operator, man named Follansbee—Ned Follansbee. I never saw him, but he fell in love with my girl, and I heard him ask her over the wire. Of course she told him she was promised, and then he told her if she was ever in trouble, why, just to call on him. Regular popular price melodrama style, eh?" He smiled unpleasantly, but a spasm of pain crossed his fat countenance. Follansbee stared at him fascinated.

"Follansbee went away—New York or somewhere—dropped out of sight. My girl got gloomy and at the last minute threw me over; said she liked the other fellow best after all. She went to Chicago, and I plugged there at Feneby till I nearly went crazy; then I came to New York."

"I got to thinking about my troubles up here in this room, and I couldn't get that Follansbee out of my head. I wanted to show him up. He made a lot of trouble. So I sat down and wrote a story—a dandy good story—about the girl and Follansbee, and I put his message into it—about her calling him if she needed him!"

"Then I fixed it up so that she would call the hero by wire, and I made up a message. You heard me ticking it off here on the machine just for fun."

Follansbee nodded. "That the story?" he asked, pointing to the scattered sheets.

"Yes. I find I've got quite a turn for writing. Might not have developed if she hadn't turned me down, eh?"

"Then you are satisfied as things have turned out with you?" asked Follansbee gravely.

"Yes. Don't look as though I were grieving, do I?" he laughed unctuously. "No, you do not." Follansbee smiled wryly and got upon his feet. "In that case, perhaps, you don't mind giving me Miss Dunham's Chicago address."

"Eh?" asked the other blankly.

"You see, I'm Ned Follansbee," explained the visitor coolly.

"The deuce you are! Well, you heard the message I was composing for my story. Well, I'll be blanked if it isn't the funniest thing I ever heard of. Say," eagerly, "do you mind if I put all this in the story too?"

"Not a bit. Put everything in, only give me her address."

The fat man fumbled in a notebook, gave the desired address and picked up a fresh sheet of paper. His face was shining with excitement and anticipation.

"Talk about coincidence!" he grinned contentedly. "Say, tell her about it when you see her, will you? She won't forget me—my name's Henderson. I'll send you a copy of the story when it comes out."

"We will look for it," said Follansbee pleasantly.

"I may as well offer congratulations," grinned the happy author extending a plump hand.

Follansbee went back to his room, packed a bag and wrote a letter to his paper.

Suddenly there clicked a message from the next room.

"Goodby, Follansbee. Good luck!"

And Follansbee, with a tender smile on his face, rapped an answer on the wall:

"Goodby, Henderson. You're a good fellow!"

NELLIE BLAKE'S COURTSHIP

It Brought a Result She Least Expected.

Nellie Blake was a very nice girl. The only trouble with her, a trouble common with most girls whose parents are abundantly able to support them, was that she hadn't enough to do to keep her out of mischief. Having finished her education, there seemed nothing more for her to do but to wait for her affinity and be married. This was not to her taste, and she proposed to her father to study—well, something, anything, so that if she should be left without—

"Nonsense!" said the father. "I'll not permit anything of the kind."

Then Nellie considered matrimony. The only man who wanted her, so far as she knew, was Fred Langley. But Fred was too matter of fact. He was a plodder. He had plodded at college, at the law school and was now plodding in his profession. She thought over a number of others, but they all had something about them unsuited to her taste. She gave up the matrimonial problem, but one day, on reading a matrimonial advertisement, just for fun she thought she would advertise for a husband and see what kind of answers one receives in such cases.

Sitting down at the desk in the library, she wrote in a large hand her own was very delicate with a stub pen and very black ink a communication in the usual form. Then lest some one should find out that she was so absurdly engaged she took it to the newspaper office herself.

A correspondence sprang up between Nellie and an unknown gentleman who called himself Alonzo Courtney. Nellie writing as Clarissa Varian, the letters growing in length till near the end an average letter covered twenty-four pages. Nellie had expected to have a good laugh at her replies. She was mistaken. The first was so delicate and deferential that no one but a thoroughbred could have written it. All denoted extreme refinement. Then the original and attractive ideas the man had! And how those ideas appealed to her! It was marvelous that one who had never seen her should have such an insight into her most hidden feelings. His letters became more and more impassioned till at last he begged for a meeting.

Had not Nellie Blake fallen in love with a soul she had seen expressed on paper she would not have granted such an interview. As it was, taking advantage of an evening when her parents would be out, she wrote Mr. Courtney that she would receive him at 8 o'clock. When the hour arrived, she was in the drawing room in her most becoming costume. When the doorbell sounded, her heart went up in her throat. Then came the card of Mr. Alonzo Courtney, and while he was getting off his coat and hat in the hall she thought she should faint. The drawing room door was pushed open, and in walked the matter of fact Fred Langley.

To say that Nellie was angry gives no idea of her condition. She was too enraged to say anything for a few moments. Then she hissed:

"Impostor!"

"Is it an imposture for a man to transcribe his inner self in words to one he loves?"

"How did you know that I advertised?"

"One morning, doubtless soon after you wrote your advertisement, I called on you when you were not at home. The maid, who did not know that you were out, showed me into the library and went upstairs to deliver a message from me. While waiting for her return I noticed some large black letters in reverse on the blotter on the desk. I amused myself deciphering what made an excellent puzzle and had nearly finished before it occurred to me that I was reading a secret. For this I must apologize. Will you forgive me?"

"And then?"

"It occurred to me that you had written the duplicate. I wanted to discover under cover what of strength or weakness, good or evil, there might be in you. I watched for your advertisement and answered it."

"Had you a right to do so?"

"No. One has never the right to lie in concealment for a friend. Yet had I not been your friend I should have had a perfect right. A girl who advertises for a husband is open to all the world. Would you deny me the right you had given millions of strangers?"

Nellie winced.

"Nevertheless," he went on, "the indiscretion has brought a revelation to me. I had no idea of the depth of feeling there is in your nature, your noble conceptions and especially your desire to be something more than a drone."

He could have said nothing that would have so well pleased her. She turned away to harmonize her conflicting emotions. The Alonzo Courtney she had pictured in her imagination was giving place to the plain Fred Langley. But that being who had been photographed in his letters—there he was waiting for her to speak again.

Without turning she reached her hand backward. Langley sprang forward and took it. She looked for some of the impassioned smiles she had read so often and received into her heart. Instead there was but one word:

"Sweetheart!"

Nevertheless it was the word she wanted.

HELPS FOR THE BUSY HOUSEWIFE

Porch Pillow That Is Useful and Ornamental.

The woman's touch is most clearly located by appropriate pillows, which add comfort and beauty to any room and undeniably show thought for the little things that contribute much to general effects.

For the porch, with its cretonne covered chairs and its plain rug, the square pillow that spells practical comfort shown in the picture is just the thing. This is made of denim. A central band of flowered cretonne is placed over the square, the edges held down under braid to match the color of the denim. The back is plain, and the edges are untrimmings. This on the hammock or the plain wooden seat will complete any idea in porch furnishing.

The Best Iced Tea.

If you want tea with a delicious flavor make the following experiment: Get half a pound of very fine tea and add to it a dozen jasmine or orange blossoms. Put this mixture in a perfectly tight jar away from the light and do not open for a month. If you cannot get the orange blossoms or jasmine purchase some orange flower water and soak your tea in enough of this water to cover it. In a few hours it will be ready to use.

To make the tea have the water hot, pour it over the tea and allow to stand at least twelve hours. Tea made in this way has a beautiful flavor and a delicious perfumed flavor that can be obtained in no other way. Try combining it with orange sherbet. There is no way of preparing iced tea that can compare with this. After sweetening and when you are ready to serve it place the sherbet in a bowl, pour the cold tea over it and bring them to the table together.

The Small Ice Cream Freezer.

Many women do without an ice cream freezer during the summer because they consider it too expensive. This is because most women do not stop to consider that it is not necessary to buy a large freezer, especially when a small quart one will answer the purpose. It is as handy as a meat chopper in the home. Seldom does one wish more than a quart of cream or pudding or even frozen loaves for the average family, and the work is so easily done that any loaves or puddings can be made by merely doing the work at the kitchen sink. It is so handy during the summer that those who know of the many advantages of the toy freezer would not do without one. The ice expense is not worth mentioning, for it takes comparatively little for such a freezer.

Delicious Vegetable Roast.

One-half cupful boiled corn either canned or cut from the cob, one-half cupful of baked beans mashed to a pulp, one-half cupful boiled rice, one-half cupful strained steamed tomatoes, half a teaspoonful of minced onion, two tablespoonfuls melted butter, one-quarter cupful sweet milk and salt and pepper to taste. Mix together and add enough stale bread crumbs to make a stiff dough, roll and bake in greased pan. Serve with tomato sauce.

Corn on the Cob.

Little wooden handles whose pointed metal ends may be easily inserted into the end of the corn cob are so inexpensive that they are within reach of even the most modest purse. Probably every one who has a fondness for corn on the cob has had the pleasure of eating it spoiled by the fact that the cob had to be held in the fingers, but that is all eliminated by the use of these little corn handles.

For Motor Trips.

Carry with you a "dust neck." This is a large square of linen, pongee or wash silk with a circle cut from the center and an opening cut from center to edge. Put round the neck, to be removed at the end of the journey. It is a great protection from dust. Provide two or three extra ones for guests.

To Lace the Corset Cover.

Instead of using ribbons, get white crochet cotton, crochet a string and run it through the top of the corset cover. Finish each end with a little tassel of cotton, and you will have no trouble with broken strings. By crocheting a double thread you can run it through lingerie petticoats.

Comfortable Bungalow Bed.

A folding bed, one that doubles up in the middle and takes up little more room than a card table when it is put away, is made of heavy canvas on an iron and steel frame and costs $5. It would be a comfortable bed for summer campers in tent or bungalow.

FOR THE CHILDREN

The Brownies Move.

Billie the Brownie, who lived in a tree, was troubled one morning a woodman to see. The king walked beside him and presently cried, "Just chop down that tree with the Brownies inside!"

Away galloped Billie to tell the sad news and panted, "We have not a moment to lose." Then back came his friends to the tree in the wood. And all started packing as fast as they could.

Tables and pillows and bedding and chairs. Nothing is heavy if every one shares. And, all being willing, the way to see. They very soon emptied their house in a tree.

Then Billie set out with his wife, and they found a pretty new house in a mushroom, all round.

They moved in at once, and that night they sat down to supper as gay as could be.

Two Little Caretakers.

"Now, Dot," said mother, "I want you to stand here and take care of Carlo till I come back."

Dot was a very small girl, and Carlo was a very large dog, but they had been friends for so long that both felt quite safe with the other, though Dot did hope that mother would not go far away.

She was, however, too brave to say so and, putting one arm round Carlo's neck, promised that she would not move a step.

Mother was back in a very few minutes. "I took care of Carlo, didn't I?" said the little girl.

"Yes, dear," said mother as she took her up in her arms.

But if Carlo had been able to speak we think he would have said as he leaped and barked at his mistress's side, "I never moved after you left us, and I hope you see that I took good care of Dot."

Queer Ways of Eating.

Spiders chew their food with hard, horny jaws.

The jellyfish absorbs its food by wrapping itself around the object which it seeks to eat.

The butterfly pumps nectar through a tube into its body, and bees and flies suck their food with their long tongues.

The woodpecker has a three-barbed tongue, like a Fijiian's spear, with which it draws out the worm or insect.

The cuttlefish does not chew its food with its mouth, but with its gizzard.

The horseshoe crab chews its food with its legs. The little-fellow grinds its food morsels between its thighs before passing them to the mouth.

Sturgeons draw in their food by suction and are toothless.

A Dog Groom.

The dog and the horse often become great friends and are very fond of each other. A gentleman had a Newfoundland dog that always went to the stable to get his horse. While the groom saddled the horse the dog lay with his nose between his paws.

When the horse was ready the dog took the reins in his mouth and led the horse to his master. He then followed him in his ride.

On returning the rein was given to the dog, and he led his friend back to the stable. If the groom happened to be out of the stable the dog barked loudly till he came.

A Ring Trick.

A scientific experiment which will interest young and old is to hang from the ceiling a thread which has been soaked in very salty water and then dried.

To this fasten a very light ring and announce that you are about to burn the thread without making the ring fall. The thread will burn, it is true, but the ashes it leaves are made up of crystals of salt, and they are strong enough to bear the light weight of the ring tied to the thread.

Fox in the Ring.

All the players form in a ring except the "fox." He sneaks around outside and taps one of the players on the shoulder. The one tapped starts to run around the outside of the ring in one direction, while the "fox" runs around the ring in the other direction, both making for the place vacated by the tapped child. If the "fox" gets there first the other is "it." If not the "fox" is "it" until he succeeds in getting into a "den."

A Floral Turncoat.

A novel flower has been found at the Isthmus of Tehuantepec. This flower changes its colors during the day. In the morning it is white; while the sun is at its zenith it is red, and at night it is blue. The red, white and blue flower grows on a tree about the size of a guava tree, and only at noon does it give out any perfume.

A Good Reason.

Little five-year-old Lloyd when coming through the yard one evening at dusk bumped into a tree. On his arriving home he explained to his mother his trouble. She asked him if he cried. "No," replied Lloyd, "because there wasn't anybody there to hear me."

A Resemblance.

One day last summer little four-year-old Dottie came into the house looking much frightened and exclaiming, "Oh, please hurry and come out to my playhouse to see the Teddy bear bug." There was a big brown furry caterpillar on the porch of her playhouse.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Coach Courtney Will Surely Retire.

Charles E. Courtney, the veteran coach of the Cornell university crews, will cease work as the head of the Cornell navy when his contract ends three years hence. The fact became known through a statement issued recently by Mr. Courtney. He says he may continue with the navy in an advisory capacity, but will no longer take the full responsibility of fitting the oarsmen for their grueling races. Courtney has been head coach at Cornell for twenty-eight years and has developed many winning crews.

Doyle to Umpire in World's Tour.

Jack Doyle, the former New York first baseman and since then umpire in the National league, has been named as one of the umpires for the Giants-White Sox world tour next fall. Doyle umpired in the International league after leaving the National. There is talk of appointing Kid Gleason as the other umpire for the trip. If he gets the billet it will be one more experience in a long and varied baseball career. Time was when the Kid was known as Sparrow Gleason. Back in the dim past he was a pitcher and played with the Phillies and the St. Louis club before he became second baseman for the Orioles. He also played second base for the Detroit Americans at one time and afterward for the Giants during the Joyce regime. The last few seasons he has been with the White Sox in the capacity of coach and coacher. There is a difference between a coach and a coacher. One coaches—instructs and advises—the other gets upon the line during games.

See Real Menace in Federal League.

President Chivington of the American association recently had a hasty conference with Ban Johnson in Chicago that resulted, it is said, in determining the line of action against the new Federal league. The outlaw circuit is considered to have developed into a real menace to the big minor league. It has a greater patronage in Indianapolis and has just invaded Kansas City, Toledo, Milwaukee and Louisville capitalists are clamoring for franchises. The taking of Secretary Lloyd Rickart from the Browns, the signing of several American association players and also the bare fact that the new league is making money are additional causes of concern.

Hot Cities Have No Chance, Says Mack.

The teams in "the two hot cities," as he calls them, have practically no chance to win pennants in the big leagues, said Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, recently. "A ball team in Washington or St. Louis will have to be 20 per cent stronger than any of its rivals to finish on top," he declared. "The heat and humidity rob the players of their vitality. I caught in Washington three seasons and know. St. Louis is nearly as bad. Even when the Athletics play a brief series in those towns they leave with less life than they entered with. A team that has to play in such weather half the time suffers more, of course. In Cincinnati it's a good deal the same."

Giants, Phillies and Dodgers Big Payers.

Only three National league clubs—the Giants, Brooklyn and Philadelphia—are making big money this season. In the west reports indicate a marked falling off in gate receipts in Pittsburgh, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Chicago. The poor work of the Pirates has caused a slump in the Smoky City, which is a hardship for visiting clubs. The turnstiles in St. Louis are growing rusty, while small crowds are paying to see the Reds at home. The Cubs haven't drawn as well as in former years for various reasons. The Boston Nationals will make more money this year than at any time since they were owned by Soden, Billings and Conant.

Lee Tannehill Has New Job.

Lee Tannehill, former infielder of the Kansas City club of the American Association, is now a member of the Minneapolis team. Tannehill was purchased by Manager Joseph Cantillon of Minneapolis from the Kansas City club just before the departure of that team for Milwaukee.

SAN FRANCISCO BULLETIN'S DEPRAVITY

Since the appearance of the editorial in the San Mateo Index and Daly City Record three weeks ago, condemning the lascivious and extremely indecent articles of the San Francisco Bulletin, entitled, "A Voice from the Underworld," the editor of the Index and Record has received many words of commendation from the best people of San Mateo and San Francisco counties.

We pointed out the fact that the "Bulletin articles were nothing less than licentious wickedness, being lewd, lascivious, extremely offending against chastity and should not be permitted to pass through the mails; that ordinary obscene literature such as is prohibited by law is honorable in comparison."

"Young people are in enough danger as it is," read our editorial, "but the Bulletin's stories are lessons in depravity that can have no other effect than to teach the young scamps—boys who are sowing their wild oats—how to greatly increase the danger to virtuous young girls and women." As a verification of this thought, read the following excerpt from the last issue of "Town Talk."

"Nowhere is the story of the prostitute Alice Smith more eagerly read than at Stanford University. The students of Stanford, it need not be pointed out, study this Bulletin muck purely for its sociological interest. Far be it from the disciples of Chancellor Jordan to approach this bawdy chronicle with puritan minds! When the Bulletins arrive on the campus they are quickly snapped up, and such is the demand that the price rises as high as twenty-five cents a copy. Down that way they call the voice from the underworld the 'subterranean groan.'"

There is not the slightest doubt but that the Bulletin has already caused the ruin of scores of girls and it is pitiful to contemplate the ending.

"Little by little," said a thoughtful boy,
"My spare moments I will employ,
And learn from every source and book,
The art and manner of a crook;
I'll learn to pilfer and to slay
And lead young girls on the primrose way,
Doubtless then as I grow bolder
I can go to work for Fremont Older."

THIS paper does not believe in string-tied bids for our county road bonds, but if such are imperative, then the supervisors should make one absolute stipulation, that sufficient funds MUST be available for grading the San Pedro mountain road this fall. If this is not done, the completion of our county road system in time for the Panama-Pacific Exposition will be impossible. San Pedro mountain is the most important connecting link at this time—everything else can better wait.

It was pretty near a just near a just retribution to the democratic administration that Henry Lane Wilson should sneer at the President and Secretary of State after they had permitted him to hold for several months the office which he so richly merited to lose. Henry Lane ought to be given a term of years in the embassy at Alcatraz.—Bakersfield Labor Journal

Paul Scharrenberg, Secretary of the California State Federation of Labor, announces that the new Sequoia Hotel at Fresno that had been selected as headquarters for the next state convention, has refused to live up to their promise to unionize the dining room service, so the Fulton Grand Central Hotel has been selected as headquarters.

A citizen of San Bruno writes the Index to know "if in case of incorporation, the new municipality will be compelled to stand the expense of the suit now pending against the Spring Valley Water Co. for the lowering of the flume through San Bruno?" That is a question for legal lights to determine and we are just a mere editor.

THE conference of the Board of Supervisors and County Highway Commissioners in San Francisco next Saturday to devise plans for the sale of the $352,000 worth of bonds for the purpose of immediate construction work, should and probably will result in good.

THE man who has enemies amounts to something. He is a fighter. People don't kick a corpse. A live man can swim against a current. A corpse floats down without hindrance; God bless our enemies; we love them; they make life worth living.

NOTHING will ruin the country if the people themselves will undertake its safety; and nothing can save it if they leave that safety in any hands but their own.—Daniel Webster.

LABOR UNIONISM does not sanction murder, favoring peace, not war. That is the difference between honest toilers and the I. W. W. ilk of the Westland hop ranch riot.

THE world is a wilderness of unsatisfied longing, but the poor devil has the advantage over the rich in the race for contentment and character.

FOR a man to be a loyal, good citizen of this country, he must love his country and be true to her traditions, institutions and the flag.

LET us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it.

St. Bruno's Benefit Dance

An entertainment and dance will be given in Green's Hall, San Bruno, on Saturday evening, August 30, for the benefit of St. Bruno's Catholic Church. St. Bruno's parishioners are working diligently for the success of this coming event; and a cordial invitation is extended to our many friends on the Peninsula to join us on that evening.

Building Trades Council Officers

On Thursday evening, July 31, 1913, the Building Trades Council of San Mateo County, met at the Labor Temple in San Mateo and elected the following officers for the ensuing term: President—J. H. Flynn Vice President—Patrick Keary Recording Secretary—Edward Brady Secretary-Treasurer—Charles H. Morrison Business Agent—A. S. Brown

The Building Trades Council is in excellent condition and the administration during the past year is deserving of much praise, so that it is particularly pleasing to not only Trade Unionists but to the people in general that J. H. Flynn has been retained as president, Charles H. Morrison as secretary and A. S. Brown as business agent, for they have certainly done their duty with fairness to all.

With the assurance of industrial peace such as we are now enjoying in all its satisfying assurance, local labor conditions are bound to improve.

The new officials, Patrick Keary and Edward Brady are both wide-awake gentlemen, loyal Unionists and excellent citizens, who will undoubtedly prove valuable advisers to their associates.

San Mateo Co. Development Assn.

Several months ago the Board of Governors of the San Mateo County Development Association appointed a committee from among their number to investigate the financial condition of the Association. In their report they recommended the abolishment of certain offices and discontinuance of certain methods which in their judgment were found to entail unnecessary expense. Among these was the abolishment of the office of manager.

The matters were passed as recommended with the exception of manager which action was postponed indefinitely. Since the time these recommendations were made the San Mateo Index and Daly City Record have printed editorials favorable to the abolishment of the office.

On last Monday, after the meeting of the Board of Supervisors and in the chambers of the Board, the present Association manager made a very questionable attack upon the personality of the Index and Record, and used some language which is not usually found in the phraseology of the common, every-day, self-respecting gentleman. To those who were compelled to listen to the wordy epithets it was apparent that the recommendation of the committee was indeed justifiable. And should the office by any means be determined a necessity a change in the personnel would be imperative if the purpose of the Association is to be preserved and the dignity of the organization maintained.

In meeting this attack Editor J. L. Brown maintained the decorum which denotes the large calibre man.—Coast Side Comet.

Felix Diaz

Felix Diaz will sail from San Francisco for Japan the first of August. A dispatch says he is going as a special envoy to thank the government of Japan for its participation in the Mexican exposition of 1910! It would seem when there was so much doing and Diaz was so need at home, Japan, having waited so long to be thanked, might continue to exist still yet awhile. But the present alleged government of Mexico must perform the functions of a real one wherever it finds a possible chance. Perhaps Mr. Diaz thinks he can cook up something with the Japanese or appear to, that shall move the Government at Washington to recognize the murderous gang in possession of Mexico's capital. Perhaps again Mr. Diaz foresees that it may be healthy for him to be an envoy to foreign parts just now. However it goes, Mr. Diaz is too contemptible to be given any more space in the Star.—San Francisco Star.

Decry Violence

The cause of organized labor is never helped by violence. That in the strike of the Gas Workers' Union against the Pacific Gas and Electric Company there have been many acts of violence, such as assaults on life and destruction of property, may be denied but cannot be disproved. In fact, a striking lineman of San Jose confessed to dynamiting the power lines of the Company at Alviso, and has been sentenced to one year in the penitentiary. There have been too many similar acts committed since the beginning of the strike. They deserve and receive general condemnation, and none condemn them more severely than those union men themselves who understand what Unionism means and would sincerely advance its cause.—Star.

The Coast Side Triangle residents will be glad to learn that the establishing of the protective telephone system is receiving attention. There is a matter in reference to the rate to be charged still pending before the Railroad Commission. This will have to be determined before construction work is begun. The right to extend the line and establishment of the exchanges, etc., has already been given by the commission, so that the matter of rates only is deferring the service.

This morning the crew of the early north bound Ocean Shore train sighted a body on the shore near saddle Rock. The Coroner was notified and the body was taken in charge. It was found to have been in the water about four days and had drifted in. The man was about 40 years of age. The body was nude except for a pair of shoes and a necktie. The body gave evidence of three bullet wounds and the man no doubt met death at the hands of another.

Thos. Quigley, President, W. A. Usher, Secretary, G. A. Dennison, F. E. Sealey and H. B. Wight, directors of the Ocean Shore Land Company, owners of Salada Beach, held a meeting at Salada Beach Tuesday. It is planned by this company to expend $40,000 in developing a water supply and when this is accomplished Salada Beach will have enough water to supply a city of several thousand people.

No Horseless Age

No one seems to be able to explain just why horses and mules increase in numbers and in value, in the face of the rapidly growing use of tractors, motor trucks and automobiles, says Farm Machinery. But it is a fact, if the figures produced by the United States Department of Agriculture are correct—and they should be. The department has just issued the results of its live stock census, completed on January 1, last. In this report it is shown that there were, on the farms and ranges of the United States, horses numbering 30,567,000 valued at $110.77 each, and aggregating in value $2,278,888,000. This is an increase of fifty-eight thousand horses over those enumerated one year ago, and the total horse value had increased $105,528,000.

The increase in value is noted at $4.83 a head for horses and $3.80 a head for mules. The number of mules had increased twenty-four thousand during the year.

CALE COAKLEY DBANDRHIS IE

With five justices of the peace performing the ceremony and fifteen police officers and county officials standing by as witnesses, Caleb Coakley, wealthy proprietor of a road house in Colma, who was divorced recently, and Mrs. Bessie Anthony, a dashing widow of San Francisco, again set sail on the billows of married bliss Saturday afternoon. It was the tightest knot ever tied in San Mateo county and the most unique wedding ceremony in the history of California.

The marriage was solemnized in the parlors of the Sequoia hotel at 2.30 o'clock Saturday afternoon and the ceremony was read in chorus by Justice of the Peace H. H. Lampkin of Redwood City, Justice of the Peace Ellis Johnson of Daly City, Justice of the Peace John F. Davis of San Bruno, Justice of the Peace Joseph A. McCormick of San Mateo and Justice of the Peace John Pitcher of Halfmoon Bay. Every one of the five justices implanted a smacking kiss on the blushing cheeks of the bride.

As far as the 20 officials were concerned, the wedding was an impromptu affair. Sheriff J. H. Mansfield and District Attorney Franklin Swart had called a conference of the justices of the peace and police officers of the county to discuss closer co-operation in criminal matters. The meeting was in progress when Coakley and his bride-to-be arrived. The official wedding was quickly arranged.

Justice of the Peace John Pitcher of Half Moon Bay, who is 86 years of age, was master of ceremonies, and as he said the words of the marriage ceremony his fellow justices repeated the words in chorus.

Following the wedding, Coakley invited everybody to join him and his bride in the banquet hall of the hotel. The 20 officials united in pledging a brimming cup to the happiness of the couple.

Coakley is 52 years of age and is well known in political circles. His bride is 34 years old and before her first marriage was Miss Bessie Kelly, a social favorite of San Francisco.

Among the witnesses at the wedding were Supervisor John McBain, Constables James Parker of Daly City, James Wallace of South San Francisco, Ferguson Owen of Burlingame, Michael Sheenan of San Mateo, Martin Walsh of Menlo Park and Fred Simmonds of Half Moon Bay, Sheriff J. H. Mansfield, District Attorney Franklin Swart, Under Sheriff John J. Shields, Jailer Ollie Parker, Chief of Police George E. Jones of Burlingame, Chief of Police James Coleman of Redwood City, Motorcycle Policemen Michael Brown, George Lowans, James Logan, Fred Vallejo, Maurice Sheehan and Abe Segar and Marshal Gerald Conens and Deputy Marshal Claude M. Hershey of Hillsborough.

Three Baby Prize Winners

Since July 7 a very interesting baby contest has been in progress at the Grandview theatre and on Wednesday evening the closing of the contest was witnessed by a very large audience. The cash prizes consisting of $15, $10 and $5 were awarded as follows:

First prize—Billy Sanders.
Second prize—Clara Poket.
Third prize—Rosie Biernsteine.

After the decisions were announced by flashing the pictures, the successful children were in turn taken to the stage and introduced and given their prize money, midst cheers from the audience.

The theatre management has undoubtedly conducted the contest in the fairest possible manner, and are deserving of praise therefore. In order to thoroughly satisfy everybody, all the votes have been retained and can be counted by anyone who wishes to do so. Nothing can be fairer than that.

Civic Betterment League Installation

The Civic Betterment League officers for the ensuing term were installed as follows:

President—Julius Nelson.
Vice President—F. A. Hansen.
Secretary—T. Sheehan.
Treasurer—R. R. Castle.
Sergeant-at-Arms—E. Forsell.
Executive Committee—H. H. Smith, Gust Johnson, Ellis C. Johnson, J. L. Brown, Gus Soderblom, W. M. Talbott.

After this was done and some other important business was transacted the "dogs" and "refreshments" were served in bountiful supply and hugely enjoyed by all present.

The honest way to discontinue a subscription to a newspaper is to first pay the small amount you owe. Thus you will retain the respect of the editor and guard your own peace of mind. To do otherwise, such as ordering the postmaster to notify the publisher that the paper is "refused" is cowardly.

ISRAEL SPARED, OR PASSED OVER

Exodus 12:21-31—Aug. 10.

"The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many."—Matthew 20:28.

THE tenth plague upon the Egyptians for their persistent injustice toward the Hebrews was the death of their first-borns. In every home there was death—the first-born son or daughter. The terror of such a night can better be imagined than described.

In Scripture death is always represented as the enemy of man—the penalty of sin. The death sentence came upon our first parents because of sin, and by the laws of heredity has passed to all their children—the human family. The Bible tells us that the only hope for recovery lies in the fact that God has made preparations for the satisfaction of Justice through the death of Jesus; and that during Messiah's reign the curse of death shall be removed.

What God brought upon the Egyptians at that night was, therefore, merely the same penalty that has been against all mankind for six thousand years. The first-borns, retiring in good health, were corpses before morning, the death sentence coming upon them more suddenly than it otherwise would have done.

This plague did not touch the homes of the Israelites. Their first-borns were passed over, spared, by the Almighty; hence the name Passover. By Divine command the Israelites made the anniversary of this event historical. Every Israelite shows his faith in God and his confidence in this record of Divine deliverance of his forefathers, when he celebrates the Passover.

The Passover's Real Meaning.

Israel's experiences in being passed over were allegorical. As a type they represented the experiences of God's Elect—Spiritual Israel, God's saintly people, gathered from all nations and denominations. The chief members came from Natural Israel, but no nation can lay exclusive claims. It is an elect class, chosen along the line of character alone.

Spiritual Israel was represented in the first-borns of fleshly Israel, passed over in that night. The next morning Israel went forth under the leadership of the first-borns, who subsequently became the priestly tribe, typically representing the Royal Priesthood, whose Royal High Priest is the glorified Messiah.

Just as the first-borns of Israel were not the only ones saved from Egyptian bondage, so the Church of the First-borns (Hebrews 12:23) will not be the only ones saved from the bondage of sin and death, symbolized by that Egyptian bondage. The preservation of the First-borns implies the deliverance of the remainder.

"Israel My First-Born."

Since deliverance from the power of sin and death was of God's grace, and not an obligation of justice, He had a perfect right to determine long in advance that His blessings should reach mankind through Abraham's Seed. Unnoticed by the Jews, the Lord indicated that Abraham would have two seeds; one a Heavenly, the other an earthly. Thus He said, "Thy seed shall be (1) as the stars of heaven, and (2) as the sand of the sea shore." God, in His wisdom, did not explain to Abraham the significance of this figurative statement. We, however, are permitted to see the meaning even of this feature of the Promise.

The stars represent the Heavenly Seed of Abraham—Messiah and His Church. The sand of the sea shore represents the vast multitude who will ultimately be saved from sin and death, and recovered to Divine favor and everlasting life in the Messianic Kingdom. God's providences were to the Jew first as respects spiritual privileges, and will be to the Jew first as respects earthly privileges—Restitution to human perfection.

First-Borns Blood-Protected.

Let us not fail to note that Divine favor toward the first-borns of Israel was not without blood. Indeed, the whole lesson of the Old Testament Scriptures is that "without the shedding of blood there is no remission" of sins. The Israelites took a lamb of the first year without spot, killed it and sprinkled its blood upon the door posts and lintels of their houses, and ate the flesh within.

As the Passover was typical, so also were the lamb and the sprinkled blood. The lamb represented Jesus, the Lamb of God. His death was for the sins of humanity. Christ died not merely for the Church, but, as the Scriptures declare, for the sins of the whole world.

The Church is passed over in this night of sin, especially saved in advance of the others, through the merit of the Blood. That the Blood covers more than the First-borns is shown by the fact that in the type it was sprinkled not merely upon the first-borns, but upon the house, as indicating the Household of Faith.

In every house there was death.

MEDIATION LAW.

Bills For Changing Erdman Act Are Prepared.

REASONS FOR THE ACTIONS.

National Civic Federation and Other Bodies Are Supporting Proposed Modifications Which Would Change Number of Men on Committee.

Amendments to the Erdman conciliation act have been drafted by members of the National Civic Federation and supported unanimously by a joint committee of railroad men and railroad labor representatives. A number of deviations from the Erdman act are provided for in the new bill, which will shortly be introduced in both branches of congress. Chief among these are changes in the number of members of conciliation committees when possible and the creation of the office of commissioner of mediation and arbitration.

The Civic federation calls attention to the fact that the railroad situation in the eastern part of this country is acute. The engineers and firemen have struck within the past year, and the trainmen and conductors are now taking a strike vote. This situation makes it imperative to devise means of arbitration more efficient than those which already exist.

Mr. Low, president of the National Civic Federation, has issued a statement describing the amendments and giving the reasons for their adoption by the committee. He says:

"Like all measures which represent the asset of many minds, the bill as submitted to congress represents a compromise on certain points. Both the railroads and their employees admit that the arbitration board of three, as provided by the Erdman act as it now stands, is too small when the interests affected are the interests of a whole section of the country and not a single railroad.

"The Erdman act, broadly speaking, provides for mediation between interstate railroads and their employees at the request of either party by the chief justice of the commerce court and the commissioner of labor. It also provides a method for arbitration under the authority of federal law. For several years after its enactment no appeal was made to the services of the mediators under the Erdman act. Of late years, however, it has been increasingly resorted to both by the railroads and their employees, with the result that as to the mediation features of the law the work has become so continuous and so important that the proposed bill suggests the creation of a commissioner of mediation and conciliation, to be filled by the president, by and with the advice and consent of the senate, whose time shall be exclusively devoted to this work. With the commissioner of mediation and conciliation is to be associated under the proposed bill an assistant commissioner of mediation and conciliation.

"This proposed bill, like the Erdman act, relies entirely upon voluntary arbitration. Arbitration which is voluntary has repeatedly proved its value in railroad experience, because when men arbitrate voluntarily they accept the terms of the award. Compulsory arbitration, on the other hand, is impracticable, because not even the power of the state can compel men to work under conditions which do not command their assent. When the employers and employees of a great industry, therefore, as in this instance, are simply asking for a law which will give legal sanction to a method of arbitration which both are willing to accept, the argument in favor of such legislation is exceedingly strong."

Advertising the Union.

"Good Union Medicine," sent out with the compliments of Dr. James M. Lynch, president, and Dr. John W. Hays, secretary-treasurer of the International Typographical union, comes in a gelatin capsule two inches long and one and a half inches at greatest circumference. The capsule is not, of course, to be swallowed, but the contents are supposed to be inwardly digested. In the capsule is a strip of glazed paper two inches wide by twenty-four inches long, and on it is photographed a view of the Union Printers' home at Colorado Springs, Colo., an establishment erected and maintained by the International Typographical Union of North America, the only institution of its kind in the world. On the reverse side there is printed the following "good union medicine":

Just a few of the benefits: Home for sick and aged. Pensions for superannuated members. Mortuary benefit for the family. Education for apprentices. Sanitary workrooms for compositors. Membership in one of the strongest trade unions on the North American continent. Sixty thousand members.—Quincy (Ill.) Whig.

The I. W. W. in Philadelphia.

Some of the leaders of the Industrial Workers of the World are concentrating their forces in Philadelphia with the object of attracting members to their organization. Curiously enough, their first point of attack will be the American Federation of Labor in the attempt to show that so tame, peaceful and argumentative a controversialist as a labor union which seeks by peaceful and orderly methods the uplift of workers is a menace to labor and weak compromiser with a state of society that must be regarded at all times as an inveterate enemy to be exterminated.—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE PSALM OF LABOR.

For centuries I have served mankind. For ages I have borne the burdens of the world.

I have stirred the earth. I have made it to bring forth increase.

I have caused the desert to blossom and changed the wilderness into a garden.

I have garnered the grain. I have gathered the fruit.

I have fed the world. I have provided food for all the people.

I have tamed wild beasts and made them the servants of man.

I have woven fibers into cloth and fashioned garments. I have clothed the people.

I have hewn down mountains and transformed the rock into human habitation.

I have felled the giants of the forest and made them furnish comfort and protection to man.

I have gone down into the bowels of the earth and forced her to give up her treasure.

I have wrought in the glare of the furnace, undaunted by the hissing of steam and clanging of steel.

I have enriched the nations. I have produced the wealth of the world.

But mine eyes have been blinded, and my hands have been shackled.

I did not see that the wealth I had created was mine nor that the things of life belonged to me.

But the scales are falling from my eyes. I am beginning to see. I will arise in my strength. I will break my chains.

I will take what belongs to me. I will lay hold on my own.

I will bring comfort and abundance to all. I will bring peace and joy to the multitude.

All mankind will be blessed, all the inhabitants of the earth made glad.

For I am greater than greed. I am mightier than mammon.

I am LABOR.—Ada M. Stimson, Holly, Colo.

LABEL STANDS FOR HOME.

Sacred Duty of Every Union Member to Buy Union Made Products.

The union label stands for home industry, the protection of the interests of labor, the protection of just and honorable employers from competition by cheap labor rivals, fair wages for the toiler and better trade conditions generally for both employer and employee. It guarantees the worker a better living, shorter hours, better conditions and more money for the necessities of life—the true foundations of general lasting prosperity. It is the trademark of industrial prosperity and the symbol of living wages and humane conditions. Its presence is the death certificate of slavery and starvation, and it should be sought and encouraged in every possible way. If the organized toilers themselves do not support and uplift it, who in the name of heaven can be looked to to support and uplift it? It is the sacred duty of every union man, woman and sympathizer of either sex to buy nothing but what bears that sterling mark of honest workmanship and living wages. It is the only protection of the toiler and the foundation of the entire category of benefits he is deriving from being in the union ranks. Don't forget this when you are again out buying, no matter what.—Baltimore Labor Leader

DON'T GO TO SLEEP.

Active Union Man Should Not Be Content, but Should Be Ambitious.

A little girl fell out of bed during the night. After her mother had picked her up and pacified her she asked how she happened to fall out. The child replied, "I went to sleep too near the place where I went in."

A great deal of the effort of organized labor is lost on account of members who go to sleep too near the place where they went in.

It isn't enough to join a labor union and keep one's name on the membership roll by paying dues.

A good union man is a union man twenty-four hours every day and seven days a week. Yet we must admit that many men join labor organizations and remain only long enough thereafter to pay dues in the meeting hall, then again we have some men that are good union men while they are in the meeting, but when they leave the hall they leave their unionism behind, and there it stays until they return to the next meeting, when it is suddenly revived. The spirit of unionism should always be and always is in the heart of a true union man wherever he may go. Not for a moment does he permit it to lapse.

O'Connell Active in Labor Circles.

James O'Connell, who has been nominated as a member of the Industrial commission by President Wilson, has for more than twenty years been president of the International Association of Machinists. For the past fourteen years Mr. O'Connell has served as third vice president of the American Federation of Labor and at the present time is also president of the metal trades department of the federation, which embraces all the various trades working in metals and which has a combined membership of more than 300,000.

Union Label Display.

Cleveland Label league is planning a label display in Luna park on Labor day.

NOTABLES IN THE LIMELIGHT

Rev. Charles Stelzle, Labor Preacher and Sociologist.

Rev. Charles Stelzle, for ten years in charge of the social service work of the national Presbyterian church, has resigned his position as superintendent of the bureau of social service of the board of home missions in order to enter the broader field of general social service and church efficiency upon an undenominational basis. Mr. Stelzle will become a "consulting sociologist" for national church organizations, social service agencies and industrial enterprises. This is probably the pioneer effort in this direction, particularly with regard to religious organizations.

Mr. Stelzle is the machinist who became a preacher after twelve years' experience in the shop, for the purpose of trying to break down the antagonism existing between the workman and the church, and to introduce in the church in a national way the principles of industrial efficiency. He organized the department of church and labor for the Presbyterians, the first bureau of its kind to be established by any denomination. Similar departments have since been organized by nearly a dozen of the leading denominations in the United States.

One of the enterprises that he established for the purpose of talking out with workmen their own problems is the Labor temple in lower New York, in the most densely populated section in the city.

Explorer Stefansson, who will join the Karluk at Nome, Alaska, her first stopping place, is enthusiastic over the expedition and the outlook and says that, while every reasonable precaution will be taken to safeguard the lives of the party, it is realized both by the backers of the expedition and the members of it that even the lives of the party are secondary to the accomplishment of the work. The expedition expects to be absent in the arctic probably three years and in that time to make discoveries of importance to several sciences.

An Episode at Kingston

After Which the Old Village
Slowly Crumbled Away

By EDNA D. HILL

Kingston, from its settlement by a younger son of an English nobleman and its naming for the king of England, who ruled at the time, was an aristocratic town. There was scarcely a house in it that was not owned by a woman, for the men as fast as they came to years of maturity went to more active places. But there was not a woman in Kingston whose house was not a model of comfort, whose silver had not been handed down in the family for more than a century—some of them three centuries—and whose furniture was not antique.

True, much of the original wealth of the inhabitants of Kingston had been brought there by retired buccaners. But those whose silver had come down to them from ancestors who had taken it from some merchant vessel, compelling the owner to walk the plank, argued that in those days piracy was indulged in by persons of aristocratic birth, the present owners, and were therefore quite proud of the manner in which it had been obtained.

The aristocratic center of Kingston consisted of two blocks on the main thoroughfare. There was not a house on these two blocks whose front door was not flanked with side lights and arched glass above and whose garden was not situated in the rear, inclosed by a big wall. Some of the knockers on the doors were known to be 300 years old. There was a disposition in the town to gauge the families by the age of these knockers, which were considered in lieu of coats of arms.

In these aristocratic two blocks was one house smaller than the rest—though houses built in colonial times were not large—which had finally passed to the ownership of an old maiden who had died at the age of ninety-two. She being the last of her family, at her demise the house was shut up and remained closed for twenty years. One day the street was electrified by the presence of a painter and decorator at the Olmstead house, as it was called, and a still stronger current was turned on at the subsequent appearance of a boy of twenty and a girl of eighteen who were evidently a bride and groom. They settled down in the old house like a pair of birds just mated and about to build a nest.

Their appearance was a signal for the collection of groups of women in different houses in the district where the innovation had occurred. Had a bomb been discovered in the middle of the street, its fuse spitting venomous fire, the commotion could not have been greater. The parties interested were a few old ladies whose husbands were living, a large number of widows, a still larger number of old maids, with a small crop of maidens coming on. Such a thing as any family settling in any house in the sacred district without the permission of the social primates had never been known since a returned patent medicine man had dared do so. His family had been ignored and frozen out with in three months.

But the present case was different. These young creatures seemed to be quite respectable. What treatment should be given them? Should they be suffered to live in seclusion or called upon and invited to their neighbors' houses? One thing was certain—action in their case should be unanimous. It would never do for a wedge to be inserted into Kingston society.

After numerous consultations by different groups, with women flying from house to house to consult the old ladies who were not able to get out, there was found to be a consensus of opinion that the matter had better be left to Miss Drake, the last of the family of Drakes, who lived in the house built with the proceeds arising from piracy. Miss Drake claimed descent from Sir Francis Drake (who acquired a taste for piracy by preying on Spanish commerce), she being the authority to whom all questions of social importance were usually referred.

Miss Drake recommended that some one make it his business to find out how the couple lived; what was the young man's business. If he were a professional man and in good standing the pair might be called on and received. But if he sold or manufactured anything the matter must be further looked into. If he sold soap his admission would be out of the question.

But nothing could be learned about the young couple. They did not offer any information concerning themselves, and those who would learn of them were too well bred to ask them any questions. Besides, how could they ask questions when they had no acquaintance with the strangers? And how could they find out what was the husband's occupation when he had no occupation? He went to the nearest city, a distance of fifty miles, two or three times a week and the rest of the time remained at home. From what his occupation might be the problem became, How did he live?

All this put off a decision as to the reception of the newcomers. Some of the young persons of the town would have been glad to make their acquaintance, for youngsters are gregarious and not so set in their ways as their elders. But their mothers would not permit them to become on terms of equality with persons about whom they knew nothing. So the tea parties and the soirees went on without the bride and groom.

There were no young men in Kingston, so the groom could not make any effort in a social way, but his wife indicated that she would be pleased to make acquaintances. She occasionally smiled on meeting a neighbor and on one or two occasions dropped a remark. But as time passed and no one called on her such informal recognitions became constrained, and at last most of them ceased altogether.

When half a year had passed it began to be noticed that the bride was seldom seen out of her house, and from this time forward she appeared more and more seldom. One day a man with a satchel in his hand came up from the city with the husband and disappeared within the portal. A dozen pairs of eyes on the other side of the street saw him go in, and two dozen saw him come out. He was the only visitor the couple had received since they came to Kingston, and he went away without exchanging a word with any one except those he had come to see. He made one or two visits after this, and every time he came a desire welled up in the breasts of many women to interview him with regard to the strangers, but to speak to a man to whom they had not been introduced was not to be considered.

The next commotion among the Kingston ladies was a resplendent touring car that pulled up before the house occupied by the couple. An elderly gentleman and lady threw off their fur coats, sprang from the auto and ran up the steps. They were received by the husband, the door was closed behind them, and the battery of eyes that stormed the premises looked upon nothing but the outside of the house. On the arrival of the next train from the city the same auto brought from the station the stranger with the bag who had appeared before and two other men, all of an eminently respectable appearance.

The impression got abroad that the young wife was very ill; that the elderly couple who had come were her parents and the others were doctors.

It now occurred to the good people of Kingston that possibly they had made a mistake. These connections of the young people were certainly rich and to all appearances respectable. Was there not still time to atone for their neglect? Not that there was any atonement to be made had the couple turned out to be ordinary persons. It was due only since it had become apparent that they were both rich and respectable, for, while all the elite of Kingston were respectable, none of them were rich, and their respect for the combination was something overwhelming.

Two of the most estimable leaders of the place called at the house and sent up cards and a message asking if they could be of service. A reply came back, borne by a uniformed maid who had come from the city by train, that the lady begged to be excused from seeing them, and there was nothing they could do.

This was very nearly, if not quite, a snub. Then some one reported that a city newspaper had mentioned that a reconciliation had occurred between a wealthy banker and his wife on the one hand and their daughter and her husband on the other, the mother being a social leader and a member of one of the oldest families of the country. The young couple had eloped and hidden themselves in an obscure village called Kingston, where the bride's parents had found them.

The pride of the town was wounded by being referred to as an obscure village, and the young girls all wept bitter tears of disappointment that they had lost an opportunity to become friendly with a member of the exclusive circle of city society.

One day the automobile pulled up in front of the house in question. The elderly couple and the young couple came out, attended by a maid carrying a baby dressed in garments trimmed with the finest embroidery and lace. All got into the auto and chugged away, leaving the house to be shut up by others and an object of no further interest to the neighborhood of Kingston.

Before this episode the town had become wormy, and after it crumbled more rapidly. But few of the aristocratic set are now left, and they are too old to get out. They sit all day looking at the grass growing in the street.

Woman's World

Pretty Girl Appointed
Game Warden.

MISS NORMA FREDERIC GIBBONEY.

"I have already made two arrests for game violations. I had no trouble with the prisoners. I carried a revolver and a shotgun, and the pothunters knew that I could use either of them."

Which announcement goes to show that Miss Norma Frederic Gibboney didn't become game warden merely to wear a bright badge. Miss Gibboney was appointed warden recently by Governor Emmet O'Neal of Alabama. She probably is the only woman in the United States with this sort of commission.

When the news of her appointment was made public the pothunters in their huts along the Mobile bay marshes thought it a good joke.

"She's one of these society women," they laughed. "She never would come out on a rainy day for fear of getting her feet wet. On with the killing."

They were fully convinced of their mistake when the handsome warden came upon two of their number slaughtering ducks and marched them in with one hand resting significantly on the black butt of the revolver at her hip.

Miss Gibboney's home is Aloha. It stands among acres of forest and foliage. Mobile bay stretches away to the east, and at the back is the Dog river. She is a deadly shot with a rifle and can bring down the mallards from behind a blind with the best shots in Mobile. It was her love for animals and not the passion for hunting that led her to become one of the Alabama game police.

"It is the birds that I particularly want to protect," said Miss Gibboney recently when speaking about her work. "We seldom realize how much good they do. If they didn't prey constantly on the insects we would be without vegetation before very long. I am familiar with every bird of Alabama. Ten years ago you could see flocks of beautiful blue cranes in the edge of the water out there. Now they are curiosities."

"I have recently fitted out a log cabin in the midst of ten acres of forest that is just as nature made it. I intend to spend the rest of my life there."

Miss Gibboney is well known over the entire south. She is a frequent visitor to New Orleans. She is a descendant of Zack Taylor, Patrick Henry and the Virginia Sheltons. She is prominent in society. From now on she won't see much of receptions and pink teas.

Concerning Women.

Mrs. Elsie Clews Parsons of New York has written a book which she calls "The Old Fashioned Woman." Mayor Gaynor, who generally is credited with saying what he thinks, declared that it is a most interesting book, but suggests that the title might be changed to "Primitive Fancies About the Sex."

Mrs. Metcalf resides at the station at Sackett Harbor, on Lake Ontario, and looks after the buildings, which are old and worn, for $1 a day. She is therefore the only woman "commandant" in the United States and was present when the monument to commemorate the victory in the war of 1812 was dedicated recently.

Miss Elizabeth C. Berdan in "Reminiscences of a Diplomat's Wife," by Mrs. Hugh Fraser, is described as a former friend of the grandchildren of Queen Victoria. Upon one occasion one of the princesses gave her a ring and excused the fact that it was not a more expensive one by the remark, "But, you know, Granny Vic is so stingy."

Mrs. Susie Root Rhodes, librarian of the League of American Penwomen, is a member of the school board of Washington and has been chosen by the commissioners to represent the District of Columbia at the international congress of school hygiene to be held in Buffalo the last week in August. She is one of the editors of a cookbook now in the press.

BROOKLYN TABERNACLE

BIBLE STUDY—ON

ISRAEL SPARED, OR PASSED OVER

Exodus 12:21-31—Aug. 10.

"The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many."—Matthew 20:28.

THE tenth plague upon the Egyptians for their persistent injustice toward the Hebrews was the death of their first-borns.

In every home there was death—the first-born son or daughter. The terror of such a night can better be imagined than described.

In Scripture death is always represented as the enemy of man—the penalty of sin. The death sentence came upon our first parents because of sin, and by the laws of heredity has passed to all their children—the human family. The Bible tells us that the only hope for recovery lies in the fact that God has made preparations for the satisfaction of Justice through the death of Jesus; and that during Messiah's reign the curse of death shall be removed.

What God brought upon the Egyptians in that night was, therefore, merely the same penalty that has been against all mankind for six thousand years. The first-borns, retiring in good health, were corpses before morning, the death sentence coming upon them more suddenly than it otherwise would have done.

This plague did not touch the homes of the Israelites. Their first-borns were passed over, spared, by the Almighty; hence the name Passover. By Divine command the Israelites made the anniversary of this event historical. Every Israelite shows his faith in God and his confidence in this record of Divine deliverance of his forefathers, when he celebrates the Passover.

In every house there was death.

What God brought upon the Egyptians in that night was, therefore, merely the same penalty that has been against all mankind for six thousand years.

The Passover's Real Meaning. Israel's experiences in being passed over were allegorical. As a type they represented the experiences of God's Elect—Spiritual Israel, God's saintly people, gathered from all nations and denominations. The chief members came from Natural Israel, but no nation can lay exclusive claims. It is an elect class, chosen along the line of character alone.

Spiritual Israel was represented in the first-borns of fleshly Israel, passed over in that night. The next morning Israel went forth under the leadership of the first-borns, who subsequently became the priestly tribe, typically representing the Royal Priesthood, whose Royal High Priest is the glorified Messiah.

Just as the first-borns of Israel were not the only ones saved from Egyptian bondage, so the Church of the First-borns (Hebrews 12:23) will not be the only ones saved from the bondage of sin and death, symbolized by that Egyptian bondage. The preservation of the First-borns implies the deliverance of the remainder.

"Israel My First-Born."

Since deliverance from the power of sin and death was of God's grace, and not an obligation of justice, He had a perfect right to determine long in advance that His blessings should reach mankind through Abraham's Seed. Unnoticed by the Jews, the Lord indicated that Abraham would have two seeds; one a Heavenly, the other an earthly. Thus He said, "Thy seed shall be (1) as the stars of heaven, and (2) as the sand of the sea shore." God, in His wisdom, did not explain to Abraham the significance of this figurative statement. We, however, are permitted to see the meaning even of this feature of the Promise.

The stars represent the Heavenly Seed of Abraham—Messiah and His Church. The sand of the sea shore represents the vast multitude who will ultimately be saved from sin and death, and recovered to Divine favor and everlasting life in the Messianic Kingdom. God's providences were to the Jew first as respects spiritual privileges, and will be to the Jew first as respects earthly privileges—Restitution to human perfection.

First-Borns Blood-Protected.

Let us not fail to note that Divine favor toward the first-borns of Israel was not without blood. Indeed, the whole lesson of the Old Testament Scriptures is that "without the shedding of blood there is no remission" of sins. The Israelites took a lamb of the first year without spot, killed it and sprinkled its blood upon the door posts and lintels of their houses, and ate the flesh within.

Sprinkling the blood.

As the Passover was typical, so also were the lamb and the sprinkled blood. The lamb represented Jesus, the Lamb of God. His death was for the sins of humanity. Christ died not merely for the Church, but, as the Scriptures declare, for the sins of the whole world.

The Church is passed over in this night of sin, especially saved in advance of the others, through the merit of the Blood. That the Blood covers more than the First-borns is shown by the fact that in the type it was sprinkled not merely upon the first-borns, but upon the house, as indicating the Household of Faith.

This Is Your Town And It Is What You Make It

By HOLLAND.

WHAT makes a town? People and business. You are one of the people. What you buy helps make the business. The more you buy the better the business; the more business the better the town.

You want the town to grow and improve, don't you? Then you should help it to grow by increasing its business as much as you can. Every time you send elsewhere for goods you give your town a blow. Enough of these blows will ultimately kill the town.

The mail order houses do nothing for your town except try to kill it. Are you helping them? You are if you send your money to them for goods that you could buy at home. If you are more interested in the growth of Chicago or New York than you are in the prosperity of your own town, your own neighbors, then continue to send to mail order houses for goods. If you want your own town to thrive

SPEND YOUR MONEY
WHERE YOU MAKE IT.
